VOLUNTEERS FOR HUNDREDS OF EXPEDITIONS

He has counted birds in the rain forests of South America. He has planted trees in Europe and he has studied whales in the Pacific Ocean.

"On my last expedition I was in Hawaii. We were in a small island. We got up at 6 a.m every morning and had our breakfast. Then we went out in the boats and we looked for whales. We spent most of the day in a boat. We photographed the whales, counted them, and we recorded their songs. Whales sing to each other, you know? In the evenings, we put all the data into the computer. It was hard work, but we had a lot of fun, and I learnt a lot, too."

Earthwatch has found volunteers for hundred expeditions. They're all ordinary people- male and female, young and old, teachers, students, office workers, engineers. They've dug up dinosaur bones in North America and they've studied ancient civilizations in Central America and Australasia.
